

Judge Thomas R. Mulroy, Ret. Chicago

Thomas R. Mulroy is a full-time mediator and arbitrator who works on complex disputes nationwide. Judge Mulroy was a federal prosecutor, partner in a large firm and was a judge for fifteen years in the Cook County Law and Chancery Divisions.

While a judge, he tried hundreds of cases and wrote more than 600 legal opinions. In addition, he heard and mediated cases concerning every kind of commercial, construction, employment, business divorce, professional malpractice, securities, and real estate cases imaginable.

Judge Mulroy was also the Supervising Judge of the Law Division's Mandatory Arbitration Program and was the author of the Program's rules.

Now he uses his depth of legal experience and broad perspective to mediate difficult disputes. He knows litigation can be very personal and stressful and therefore, is meticulous about learning the details of each case. Mulroy gives the participants confidence that he understands their positions.

Judge Mulroy is a student of mediation and knows that it takes real energy and effort to resolve a case, so his mediations are creative, unrushed, and attentive to the parties' interests. Judge Mulroy's determination and wide-ranging legal experience helps him bring the parties together to close a deal in the most difficult cases. He likes hard work.
